Gawd, but we don't need another blog post about Bangkok. Like the top ten tourist traps to visit; or the top ten restaurants that you'll never find, let alone eat at; or you gotta see Wat Arun and the Grand Palace. Enough! So I wrote a poem instead. Enjoy.

bangkok

dazzle frazzle, baffle boggle rabid dawn turns starless night naughty, bawdy, smoggy, haughty frothing fuddles of beauty & blight afflicted, addicted, unrestricted a fevered nirvana of ruckus & roar rude, lewd, always misconstrued a wild dystopia to its tropical core erotic hypnotic narcotic frolic passion fruit sweets & taboo bites temptation, flirtation, no moderation opium dreams of ladyboy nights swarming, warming, thunder forming spurting squirting blurring rain wild fandangos of mango tango gobs of mobs gone splendidly insane please indulge her vulture culture breathe this burning churning craze sexy smexy, fleshy messy monks muddling through a moral maze pad Thai stir fry lychee lullaby frenzy fueled by fish sauce drizzle spicy seditious, so delicious street woks smoke, sear & sizzle fatal attraction, green curry action the Temple of Dawn madness mocks alienation mutation to jubilation a Siam puzzle box, Bangkok rocks.
